ATLANTA, June 29, 2011 5pm (EST) – iVision, the technology integration and transformation engineers, today announced the company has been engaged to architect and implement a next-generation private cloud computing infrastructure for global law firm Kilpatrick Townsend & Stockton, LLP. iVision's work will span the four continents and 18 offices where Kilpatrick Townsend & Stockton, LLP now serves clients, a result of the recently announced merger between Kilpatrick Stockton and Townsend and Townsend and Crew.

Drawing on the company's talents and experience in technology transformations, iVision will provide technical leadership to guide the firm through a significant upgrade of its data centers, global network and end-user computing platform. The comprehensive engagement will include:

- The integration of the firms' voice, data, and video networks in North America, Europe, Asia and the Middle East.
- Project and program management for the integration of business-critical application services.
- Remote monitoring and management of all data centers and remote office locations, which currently support more than 1,500 users.

"We are laying a solid technology foundation for the next five years," said Jamie Usher, chief information officer at Kilpatrick Townsend & Stockton, LLP. "With iVision, we are building an IT environment to provide the best user experience for our attorneys and support staff, while simultaneously reducing costs and setting ourselves apart from our competitors."

"iVision is honored that our long-standing relationship with the firm continues to grow as they expand globally," said Gabe Damiani, chief executive officer at iVision. "With this new private cloud platform, Kilpatrick will significantly reduce the cost of the combined post-merger environments and establish an IT foundation to differentiate itself in the market."
